FRIEND OF 'PRETTY BOY' IS CONVICTED

-a word in edgewise; wise and otherwise

By I. M. WISE

Not enterprises, wealth or any form of material grandeur make cities and nations great, but men of high ideals and character, said an ancient Greek philosopher. Empires have crumbled into the dust and been forgotten but the lofty motives of men transcend the affairs of the moment and leave their imprint as a guide for humanity to follow.

A TRIBUTE

It is with a feeling of inadequacy that I attempt in my feeble halting way, to say a few words concerning a man whose life almost since the founding of Richmond has been entwined with her destiny.

I speak of Charles S. Renwick whose sudden call from earthly endeavors has shocked this community, saddened the hearts of those who knew him intimately, and caused universal regret by reason of his interest and participation in public affairs and those organizations which have for their objective human uplift and advancement in many forms. And while interested in earthly things he always had his eyes on the stars, and his heart attuned to the infinite. His was not a narrow creed of sectarianism, but an embracing wholesome religion that included humanity in its scope and interest.

LIFE PHILOSOPHY

Charles Renwick was a man who said little, but did much; a man of deeds, not words. In the early history of Richmond, it was my privilege to know him and that friendship was renewed not many months ago. Should I be asked to set forth his philosophy of life it would be in the words from the poem of Eva Rose York:

"And let no chance by me be lost
To kindness show at any cost.
I shall not pass this way again.
Then let me now relieve some pain.
Remove some barrier from the road
Or brighten some one's heavy load;
A helping hand to this one lend
Then turn some other to befriend"

WILL BE MISSED

Richmond will miss Charles Renwick, his loyalty to his adopted city

Oil Tank Ship Strike Is Ended

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—UP—Termination of the four-months old strike of union seamen aboard oil tankships of the coast came today with announcement that the workers have voted to return to their jobs.

S. M. Kelley, secretary-treasurer of the Maritime Federation and George Larsen, secretary of the sailors' union, reported an end of the walkout.

Employers, who repeatedly have refused to arbitrate issues in the walkout contending that the strike was at an unofficial end, said the men were applying for jobs "in the usual way."

A. RICCHETTI HELD GUILTY IN MASSACRE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 17 — UP—A criminal court jury tonight found Adam Ricchetti guilty of participating in the Union Station massacre two years ago and decreed that he must die on the gallows.

The jury returned the verdict at 8:30 P. M., three hours and 46 minutes after it had received the case.

GANGSTER DAZED

When the foreman read it, Ricchetti arose, then started to walk away as if in a daze. Recovering his senses, he sat down and forced a smile.

Chief Defense Counsel Ralph Lathaw made a routine motion for a new trial and District Judge Ray Cowan allowed him ten days in which to prepare the motion. If the motion is denied the date for execution will then be set.

HELD FOR MURDER

Ricchetti was convicted of the murder of a Kansas City detective, Frank Hermanson, one of four peace officers shot down in a murderous attempt to free gangster Frank Nash, a Federal prisoner.

Nash also was killed in the massacre—a crime that aroused America to the menace of southwest bad men.

G MAN SLAIN

One of the peace officers murdered was a Federal agent and the G men turned all their resources into the task of apprehending the criminals.

After months of investigation, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Kansas City police department named three men as perpetrators of the massacre.

These killers, authorities said, were Charles A. "Pretty Boy" Floyd, Verne Miller, North Dakota outlaw and Richetti, Floyd's crony.

Nuisance Tax Is Voted By Congressmen

WASHINGTON, June 17.—UP—The House voted today to continue for two more years the taxes you pay when you buy a ticket to the movies or a gallon of gasoline.

Congress called them "nuisance taxes" because they keep the average American fishing in his pockets for stray pennies and nickels, which, in time, flow into the Federal treasury.

When all this dribble of small change is added up a year from now, it will total about $502,000,000.

Then yesterday afternoon press reports from Reno, Nev., announced that among those receiving marriage licenses were Myrtle Crisler, of Richmond and Sigmund Schuldt, of Concord.

Midget Race Ordinance Is Defeated

Automobile, motorcycle and bicycle races are taboo in El Cerrito, the city council of that city Monday evening refusing passage of an ordinance permitting what is known as midget races. The controversial subject was disposed of by a three to two vote, as follows: Ayes—Beck and Nissen; noes—Huber, Navallier and Larsen.

The matter was freely discussed not only by the councilmen but also by people in the audience.

Navallier contended there was no guarantee that the racing association would hire the number of men promised positions or pay a fair wage.

Huber and Larsen based their objections on the ground of noise disturbances to residents in the vicinity of the track. It was the intention to utilize the track of the El Cerrito Kennel Club.

Councilman J. R. Beck and Hans M. Nissen said they favored the enterprise as it would give employment to local people.

Harold Sawallisch, the attorney representing the California Motorcycle, Automobile and Bicycle Racing Association, claimed that in

Family Says Death Was Not Suicide

An extra dose of reducing tablets, taken through mistake, and not with suicidal intent, was responsible for the death of Mrs. Ella Alberts last Saturday, according to a statement made by members of the family last evening.

The story of the tragic death of her mother was related by a daughter, Virginia. "My mother had been worrying over a possible cut in the hours of employment of my father" she said. "She had become very nervous as a result, and forgetting she had already taken the prescribed dose of reducing tablets once that day, took another dose.

"On Saturday she was engaged in doing a washing. After taking the pills she went into the yard and finished hanging the washing on the line. When she came into the house she complained of feeling tired and laid down to rest. My youngest brother, Vernon was in the room with her and she requested him to get a wet, cold cloth and put it on her head. My father went into the

SOLONS END LONG MEET AT CAPITAL

SACRAMENTO, June 17 — UP—Plans for a special session of the legislature early next year were going forward tonight, despite the fact the 51st session had just been completed.

Adjournment of the legislature was taken early today after administration demands for revenue had been met, but State officials believed the new tax measures would not produce the $118,000,000 that has been estimated and predicted additional levies would be necessary next year if the budget was to remain on a fairly even keel.

TAX PROGRAM

The new tax program over which members of both houses fought for 125 days will cost every person in California an average of approximately $18 a biennium.

Included in the list of officials who believe that more taxes will be necessary to balance the $376,000,000 budget, State Controller Ray L. Riley estimated that $20,000,000 or more will be needed to bring the revenue to a maximum level.

JOBLESS RELIEF

In addition to the regular tax needs, the legislature still faces the task of raising $24,000,000 for

Murder Of Trio Is Confessed By San Diego Man

SAN DIEGO, June 17 UP The asserted slaying of a mother and her two children in 1933 was reported confessed here today by Carl Richey, 50-year old carpenter.

Richey was said to have admitted in the confession that he leaped from his car while driving near Barrett Lake, in San Diego county, allowing the machine to plunge over a 100-foot cliff and carry Mrs. Pearl Equina and her two children, Carl 4, and one-year old Patrick to their deaths.

The skeletons of the children and the women were not found until October, 1934. Richey, according to police, said he was driving along a weaving road when he looked over the edge of the cliff and an overpowering impulse made him leap from the car.

Announcement of Torres' asserted confession was made by Undersheriff Al Aljets.

Torres, held since the day of the killing, had steadfastly denied any knowledge of the murder until last night when he confessed, it is claimed, to Deputy Sheriff Ted Crist. Crist was assisted in investigations that led to the asserted confession by Deputies George Burton and Herb Logan.

RELEASE FOR TOM MOONEY PREDICTED

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17 —UP Eighteen years' unavailing struggle in the courts for freedom by Tom Mooney, convicted Preparedness Day bomber, reached a turning point today when the State Supreme Court issued a writ of habeas carpus to him.

The writ is returnable June 27. At that time the state's highest court will receive the state's answer to Mooney's petition for the writ. It also was expected to set a date for hearing on the application, at which Frank P. Walsh, New York, John F. Finerty, Washington, and George Davis, San Francisco, counsel for Mooney, may present a complete review of the case.

APPEAR JUNE 27

Mooney will appear at the June 27 hearing.

In granting the writ the court today completely reversed its previous stand in the case. In 1918 the court ruled that it had no jurisdiction in the affair.

Mooney contends that he was convicted on perjured testimony, and that for this reason he has been kept in "illegal and unwarranted imprisonment."

VICTORY FOR MOONEY

If, in its coming hearing, the court finds that Mooney's claims regarding perjured and "framed"

Clipper Is In Hawaii After Hop

HONOLULU, June 17 UP The giant four motored Clipper ship, pioneering Pan-American Airways trans-Pacific route, landed on Pearl Harbor at 6:58 tonight, completing a round trip flight to Sand Island in the Midway group, 1,323 miles northwest of Honolulu.

The plane dipped to an easy landing after a flight of about 10 hours.

Its arrival completed the third leg in a round trip flight from Alameda to Midway Island. After resting here a day or so, the Clipper will set out once more for Alameda.

Much of today's flight was made with the cabin of the plane covered with canvas flaps. "Blind flying" conditions and cloudy weather gave the crew of five with Captain Edwin C. Musick and two passengers a thorough test of the radio directional beam used to guide the plane.

Hospital Ordinance Proposal Is Debated At Supervisors Meet

The proposed plan to put the conduct of the county hospital under a commission of doctors and laymen ran into the snag of divided opinion among the proponents of the measure, before the Board of Supervisors yesterday afternoon, and consequently further hearing will be held the second Monday in July.

Each group had a different idea as to the conduct of the institution and even the doctor who was there to represent the County Medical Association proposed an entirely new plan than that contained in the ordinance.

The two hours devoted to discussion had some spice and ginger injected into it by a tilt between J. B. McFarland, secretary of the Contra Costa Taxpayers Association and Supervisor James N. Long of Richmond. The association's representative had intimated that there was politics in the conduct of the hospital and Long said he proposed to make him prove the assertion.

At the close of the session Mr. Long gave some very interesting figures and some sidelights on his method of granting admission to people to the hospital from this district, which evidenced the fact that the procedure he has followed was, broadly speaking, the principle for which many of the proponents of the measure were contending for.

BOARD HAS CHAMPIONS

The supervisors were not without their champions for several taxpayers openly commended them for the manner in which the affairs of the hospital have been conducted. The argument that a commission would save the taxpayers money was thoroughly exploded when the information was made known that the cost per patient in Contra Costa county is $1.63 a day as against $6.40 in Alameda county, where the county hospital is run by a commission and which had been cited

Fire House Is Wanted By Annex

A numerously signed petition by residents of the Annex district was presented to the council at its meeting last evening in which relief for that section was asked.

The petitioners urged that a fire station be established in the district, that the wooden curbs be replaced with concrete, and that the weeds in the lots be burned.

L. W. Hunt and J. M. Christensen, residents of the section said the fire hazard in the district was great, and the people thought they were entitled to some relief.

W. W. Scott, who acted as mayor pro tem said these matters had already been discussed in committee meetings, and further consideration would be given them at the time the budget was made up in July.

Share Wealth Plan Advocated By Huey Beaten

WASHINGTON, June 17.—UP—The Senate gave Huey P. Long a stunning rebuke today when it defeated his five billion dollar "share the wealth plan," offered as a substitute for the Administration's social security bill without even the formality of a roll call or opposition by party leaders.

The action climaxed another day of desultory debate which virtually assured passage of the social security measure in the upper chamber tomorrow.

The Long plan died amid a thundering chorus of "noes" a few minutes after Long had taken his seat.

For nearly an hour he had read passages from the Bible, described the French revolution and related instances of poverty in this nation in urging adoption of his program.

Bloody Clothes Give Hint To A Possible Murder

SANTA ROSA, June 17 UP A blood stained bundle of clothing found in a field north of here tonight furnished authorities a baffling clue to a possible murder.

Sheriff Patterson said several strips of knotted flannel in the package indicated the wearer of the clothes might have been bound then killed in a gangland ride.

FERRY PLAN IS OFFERED BY ST. SURE

The East Bay Street Railways Limited is willing to cooperate with the officials of Richmond in ironing out the transportation problems of the city, providing the company is not asked to increase its losses, was practically the statement made to the council last evening by William P. St. Sure, vice president of the corporation.

BETTER SERVICE ASKED

Better facilities have been asked for the Pullman district and also a line to run from the Standard Oil company connecting up with the San Rafael ferry.

St. Sure took up these problems and answered them by stating that the ferry was a public utility; that its principal business was transporting automobiles; that its foot passenger traffic was very small, and his company did not feel it should be asked to bear this additional burden.

The official however stated his company would be willing to provide the service to the ferry at actual cost, and whatever fares were taken in would be turned over to the ferry. The service would include 12 round trips daily. The operating cost would be seven cents a mile or $2.80, and the cost of the bus operator covering 13 hours $8.78, making a total cost of $11.58 per day.

OPERATE AT LOSS

On the Pullman line, St. Sure said that in the original set-up,

Favor Bears To Capture Big Regatta

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 17.—UP—The seven varsity crews which tomorrow will sweep down the Hudson in the Poughkeepsie regatta cut short their final preparations today as a blazing, blistering sun beat down on the placid Hudson.

The advance guard of the 80,000 expected to watch tomorrow's three-race program, began arriving. Nelson House, traditional downtown headquarters, was jammed with old blues who discussed in the main, the chances of the top-ranking crews, California, Navy and Washington. In the betting, the varsity boats were rated in that order, with the regard for the stout-armed Naval Academy crew rising by the hour.

For the first time in many years there is a big demand for seats on the observation train. Peter H. Troy, chairman of the Poughkeepsie committee said that nearly all seats on the 16-car train had been sold.

Rusty Callow, coach of the Pennsylvania crew, today joined the long list of experts who favor California's Golden Bears. Callow predicted that the Bears would be followed by Navy, with Washington third.

LANDIS SAYS PITTS MAY BE BALL PLAYER

CHICAGO, June 17—UP—Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball's high commissioner, ruled today that Alabama Pitts, recently released from Sing Sing prison, may play in organized baseball.

Landis' ruling was on an appeal by Johnny Evers, manager of the Albany baseball club, from a decision of the minor leagues' executive committee, which upheld the barring of Pitts by Judge W. G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Minor League Baseball clubs.

Judge Bramham felt the Albany club was "exploiting an ex-convict for publicity purposes." There was nationwide protest, with Evers threatening to quit baseball himself if the 24-year-old athlete, whose correct name is Edwin C. Pitts, was barred in final decisions.

The ruling carried the stipulation that Pitts would be given another contract which would bar him from exhibition contests and allow him to play only in regularly scheduled games. Landis explained that this was to avoid "notoriety."

Judge Landis attributed the crime for which Pitts went to Sing Sing, a $10 holdup with an accomplice in which Pitts held a gun, to "the moral disorder affecting that portion of martyred youth whose desires for easy money, thrills and high life have brought about the pathetic and tragic fact that a great majority of crimes involving the use of weapons are committed by youths of 17 to 25."

"There is no objection whatsoever," Landis said, "to baseball clubs assisting paroled convicts by employing them in any other capacity in the business of the club, but employment connected with the playing of the game as player, coach, manager or umpire presents a wholly different situation.

"It concerns other clubs and cannot be left up to the individual clubs."

Australia And America Clash In Race Tonight

Australia's world record holding "Kangaroos" will face their own private crash jinx as well as America's speed kings at the Emeryville Speedway this evening.

In their two invasions of the Emeryville course the Australians have wound up in spectacular crashes every time they tried to maneuver through the tricky turns under full throttle.

This time they will have their little Ernie Evans, 24-year-old Melbourne daredevil who led them on triumphant invasions of South America and Europe, and Clem Mitchell, who shook off the jink at Fresno to ride America's Wilbur Lamoreaux into the first and break a Sprouts Elder record.

Lined up against them will be Lamoreaux, who is returning for the sole purpose of meeting his conqueror, Mitchell, Ray Grant and Putt Mossman, two of the game's most colorful riders, who have just returned from a title winning tour of the Orient, Pete Coleman, 20-year-old Pasadena lad who looms as the nation's next scratch rider, and Don Westergard, recently crowned champion of Canada.

The Americans will keep an extra close watch on Mitchell as the result of word from Fresno of a sensational maneuver executed by Australia's Wild Man Will Rogers. Wheel to wheel with Lamoreaux going into the final turn, Rogers suddenly catapulted his matchine up onto the crash wall and bulleted along the boards in motordrome style to beat the Frenchman across the line. Mitchell is reported to be past master of the maneuver.

addition to employing local labor in building the track from 20 to 30 local people would be given work during the racing season.

Many in the audience spoke for and against the passage of the ordinance. Some said they favored the ordinance on account of increased employment and others were against it because the noise would disturb their children's sleep and interfere with their school work.

The ordinance as submitted to the council provided for a fee of $100 per year, that at least 3 officers be on duty to be paid $4.00 for 4 hours' work or $5.00 for over 4 hours in any 24 hours; that local residents be employed in the construction and operation of the track, racing to be conducted either two nights or two days a week or one night and one afternoon a week with no racing after 11 P. M.

CAR CRASHES INTO EL CERRITO OFFICE

The office of the B. F. Denton mercantile establishment was the scene of a peculiar accident Monday morning at 3:30 when a big Studebaker sedan driven by Philip Agostini of Oakland left its parking place in front of the Southern club, made a half circle, plunged across the sidewalk and through the wall of the Denton office, smashed across the room and stopped against the steel safe at the rear wall of the room. Everything in the office room was smashed to pieces with the exception of the steel safe.

Miss Denton was sleeping in the living room adjoining the office. The impact loosened the plaster on the ceiling of the living room and it fell upon the piano and other furniture but missed Miss Denton by a few inches.

Agostini is proprietory of the Florence Cafe in Oakland. It is reported that no one in his car was injured. He had three passengers, but only one of them was present when officers arrived upon the scene. He was taken to city hall for questioning but turned loose upon his own recognizance.

WAKE UP IN 6th INNING AND WIN

"It is a notable victory for Mooney," Davis said here. "The order is a notice that the court accepts jurisdiction in the case, whereas formerly it held that because of limitations in the law regarding proof of perjury brought forward after a defendant is sentenced it was unable to offer any remedy to the prisoner."

URGED BY COURT

Mooney's petition reached the Supreme Court after it had been refused by a superior court and the State district court of appeal.

It represented an action started after the United States Supreme Court, in a decision regarded by Mooney's counsel as favorable to his cause, urged that all possible remedy from the California courts be exhausted before the matter was taken to the nation's highest tribunal.

HOLLYWOOD, une 17 — Maybe there's a moral in this, W. C. Fields doesn't know of any, yet the fact remains—

Fields, one of the screen's leading comedians, is a former juggler.

Fred Allen, one of radio's first comics, is an ex-juggler.

Jimmy Savo, in the front ranks of the stage comics, once dabbled in the feats of nimble and agile fingers.

"Offhand," said Fields, juggling gracefully on a treadmill for a scene in his new picture, "Everything Happens At Once," "I can't offer a reason for these things. May be it's just that a guy must have a sense of humor to be a juggler in the first place.

"There is nothing particularly uplifting about someone tossing five or six balls in the air and catching them. Your true juggler realizes this, and is greatly amused thereat. He realizes how silly he must look, a full grown man balancing a billiard cue on the end of his chin, or a derby hat on his toe. No man without a sense of humor would dare attempt this. He looks too ridiculous.

"Maybe this sense of humor even actually causes him to desist from his juggling ways, and to settle down to good, clean fun in a natural way."

Impressed with this profound reasoning Fields forgot to run, and the treadmill inexorably drew him backward. He leaped forward with a burst of speed and soon was trotting along as easily as ever. He explained that he was getting in practice.

"Life is like this," Fields observed. "Here I am, running my head off and getting nowhere. Yet I have time to snatch a cigar from the hand of an honest electrician who is really doing something worthwhile. If I hadn't been a juggler, I might be down there with him, wrestling the kilowatts and struggling with amperes."

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

WASHINGTON, June 17— The story of the behind-the-scenes maneuvering which put across the Holding Corporation in the Senate is one of the most amazing and significant in the annals of the New Deal.

The significance lies in the fact that even on a bill which was known as the President's pet, a large section of his own party deserted him. It took the independent Republicans to put the bill across. This condition will intensify as time goes on.

The amazing part of the hidden struggle was that James Aloysius Farley—anything but a radical—and the chief henchman, hefty Emil Hurjo, same in at the last moment to put the bill across.

The complete story includes that of one of the most powerful and effective lobbies seen in Washington since the public utilities rallied their forces against Senator Tom Walsh's power trust investigation in 1927.

Dinner parties, stag get-togethers, high-pressure sales talk, all were used by the utility moguls to bring in votes. One Senator's apartment was the scene of almost nightly mint julep soirees where uncertain Senators were brought in to meet the barons of big business.

EX-ENEMIES

Most active of the lobbyists were two strange bedfellows:

Joseph P. Tumulty, one-time secretary for the great reformer, Woodrow Wilson, who has now built up a thriving law practice in the capital.

George Moses, arch-Republican ex-Senator from New Hampshire.

Once ardent political enemies, they became allies.

Aiding them behind the scenes was Harvey Couch, one-time member of the RFC, heavy campaign contributor to Senator Joe Robinson, and powerful utility magnate in Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana. Couch centered his attention on Pat Harrison and Joe Robinson chief Democratic leaders.

DELAY

The strategy of the opposition was delay. The longer they could stall off a vote, the more votes they thought they could gain. Therefore, on the day before the final vote, Harrison, who was secretly opposed to the bill (though lining up with the President on a final showdown), attempted to sidetrack it. He proposed bringing up the NRA resolution instead. This would have meant another week's wait, probable defeat.

At this point Tom Corcoran, Roosevelt's private operator for the bill, telephoned him in Hyde Park. Delay, he warned, was fatal. Roosevelt in turn telephoned his Senate leaders and they kowtowed before his command.

That night the utility lobby launched its mightiest offensive social and otherwise. Next morning when the Senate convened, barrel-breasted Senator Dieterich, floor manager of the opposition, sat at his desk supremely confident. He had made a secret poll which netted him 47 votes in favor of his amendment. This was aimed to take the heart out of the bill.

Even staunch supporters of the President, such as Byrnes of South Carolina, Clark of Missouri and Radcliffe of Maryland, Roosevelt's former employer, had deserted him.

It was at this point—in response to another call from Hyde Park that Big Jim Farley and Emil Hurja got busy. While Dieterich lolled unsuspectingly in his seat, they snatched three votes—Adams of Colorado, Guffey of Pennsylvania and McAdoo of California.

The move gave Roosevelt a margin of exactly one vote over the Dieterich amendment. But next time it may be more difficult.

GERRY VS. DOWLING

Eddie Dowling, famous stage star one-time candidate for Senator from Rhode Island against Peter Gerry, and producer of the Broadway show "Thumbs Up" has a brother who is a United States marshal in Rhode Island. While Eddie's show was running in New York, his brother same to see it.

"Gee, Eddie," he said after the spectacle was over, "that must have cost you a lot."

"About $175,000" replied the elder Dowling.

"Well, no wonder you withdrew and let Gerry have the Senatorship" remarked his brother.

"What do you mean?"

"Why, don't you know? Everyone in Rhode Island says that the only reason you got out and let Peter Gerry have it was because he put up all the money for your show."

Note: Eddie had his financial backers, but Senator Gerry was not one of them.

TEXAS BLAST

Senator "Long Tom" Connally of Texas believes in going to bat for those who bat for him.

Arthur C. Perry, who batted for him twelve years as secretary recently was up before Civil Service for appointment to the Federal communications commission. Perry had an excellent record, but was short on legal experience. So Senator Connally went before the commission to help him out.

In the middle of the Senator's statement, one commissioner called attention to the requirement of six years legal experience which Perry did not have.

"Sir, snorted Long Tom, "this is my testimony. I do not like the tone of your questions. More than that, I do not like your face."

Whereupon the meeting adjourned.

Note: The commission stuck by its guns.

NEW YORK INSIDE OUT

By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK, June 17.—Traders in the more questionable enterprises on which the New York underworld thrives have their own private slang. Usually it is designed to baffle innocent customers, and the average citizen would find it a mystifying puzzle to solve.

Living on the fringe of legitimate trade are merchants and salesmen who find profit in ignoring copybook ethics. With special words and phrases they can even discuss the details of the crime in the presence of a sucker without alarming him.

To the prospective buyer of an automobile from a disreputable second hand dealer there might seem to be nothing sinister in a remark about "bushing him $100 on the smacko," but this should be the signal to leave in a hurry. A smacko is a badly wrecked car that has been rebuilt. The process of bushing is to get the customer "in the bag for a d. p." (signing up with a down payment), and then, when the final contract is to be signed to raise the price above that which was set originally.

The price raising is not disclosed until after the dealer has picked up the original receipt, leaving the buyer with no evidence of either the agreed price or, more important, the down payment. The chances of getting the $100 back, therefore, are negligible, and the car at the new price is obviously no bargain.

"Iron" is the dealer's name for an obsolete model. "Cuffing" or "macing" a car is the term for a purchase by a dealer from an individual upon a small cash payment and a series of notes which he has no intention of meeting.

It's a case, in other words, of doping the patient and then sinking the hooks into him.

unemployment relief purposes next year. The budget provided relief funds for only one year.

Another problem still remaining unsettled is the vital one of providing funds for necessary buildings at State hospitals, prisons and other institutions.

SPECIAL ELECTION

During the closing hours the legislature authorized a special election August 13 at which voters will be asked to approve a State bond issue for building purposes. Should the proposal fail, the task of relieving seriously over-crowded conditions will have to be met in some other fashion.

The special election ballot also will include a proposal to permit the State to borrow money on a short term basis. Officials claim this plan would save the State thousands of dollars by eliminating 5 percent registered warrants in times of needs.

HOUSE-PARTY MURDER

by Mildred Snow Gleason

CHAPTER XXXIV

IN THE library, the silence prolonged itself. Joan had finished her coffee before she noticed that the others had not touched theirs. Rodney was carefully examining a sealed bottle of brandy before he removed the cork.

"I guess this is safe enough," he said.

Stephen laughed nervously. "I hope so."

Joan, reassuring herself with the thought that the same trick would hardly be played twice remembered Timothy's instructions and suggested bridge.

"It makes me nervous to sit still and do nothing," she explained.

"You can count me out," said William. "I'm going to bed shortly."

Timothy glanced at the clock on the mantel. It was nearly eleven o'clock.

"I think we're all pretty well done in Joan," he said quietly, and she understood that the bridge game was no longer a necessity.

The time was evidently ripe for his plan. She noticed that the lamp on the table was burning very low. Watching it and wondering how soon before it would flicker out she felt a little cold shiver run up her spine. There was a sudden howl of the wind and the eternal shutter began to bang again against the side of the house.

TIMOTHY walked to the window and stood listening for awhile. Then he turned back with a shrug.

"The storm is wearing itself out," he said. "By morning, I think it will be clear."

"I hope so," Stephen murmured fervently. "There is nothing gets on my nerves like wind."

Rodney grunted something and then there was silence again. The room was already in semi-darkness cigarette smoke was thick in the air and the lamp continued to burn lower and lower. The smell was very unpleasant. It seemed incredible Joan thought that no one should notice it. Or was it because no one wanted to notice?

It was Stephen who suddenly called attention to the dimness.

"I say," he exclaimed, "that lamp is going out!"

Timothy bent over it. "Needs kerosene," he said laconically. "Call Meyers will you, Joan?"

Joan obeyed mechanically, going out into the hall. There too the lamps were almost out. Going as far as the dining room she called Meyers. He appeared from the pantry almost immediately. His face looked ghastly in the increasing gloom.

"The lamps need kerosene," Joan said.

The butler moistened his lips. "There isn't any more, miss."

"Well get candles then."

"The candles have disappeared, miss."

Joan controlled a shiver.

"Very well," she said quietly. "Stay in the pantry. I may need you later."

"Yes, miss," the man answered.

JOAN went back to the library. "There is no more kerosene," she said slowly, "and there are no more candles."

In the semi-darkness, five faces turned towards her apprehensively.

"No light," William murmured, and Rodney let out an oath.

"What will we do?" Stephen asked.

As he spoke, the lamp flickered, smoked and went out.

"The necklace," some one whispered.

And then, for a moment there was silence—heavy, thick silence. Joan could feel her heart pounding and she was trembling. Somebody struck a match but it went out. There was a sharp exclamation from William as he barked a shin against a chair.

"There's a candle up in my room," he said suddenly. "I'll go get it."

"This is terrible!"

Joan recognized Stephen's voice. Then silence again and suddenly, a muffled whisper:

"I think it would be dangerous to use a light now."

Ruth, her voice nervously shrill, challenged the unknown whisperer.

"Why?"

There was no answer. Then Timothy spoke clearly and firmly.

"Don't get panicky. William thinks he has a candle and Miss Andrews, I believe, has a flashlight in her room."

"I'll go for it," Ruth answered promptly and Joan had a sudden feeling that she was speaking a lesson carefully learned.

"I'll go with you," said William. "There must be other candles somewhere."

"I THINK," said Stephen, "that it would be much better if we all stayed together." Silence. "I say, William," he said again, "don't you think we'd better stick together?"

Still there was no answer. William had gone.

"I think the best thing to do would be for us all to go to bed," said Timothy, and Joan was relieved to know he was still near. "One flashlight and a candle or two won't do much good but we don't need light to sleep by. I'm going up."

"I say, Reilly, wait for me," Stephen called. "I'm coming, too."

After that, there was more silence. Joan stood for a moment, frightened, and then felt for a chair and sat down. Every one, apparently, had gone. Timothy had told her to stay where she was, but it was horrible sitting alone in the dark, waiting and wondering.

The wind seemed to have resumed its old fury and the beating shutter began to be almost unbearable. Bang, bang, Bang, bang, bang, Bang, bang. "I must pull myself together," she thought. "I'm quite safe here. I mustn't lose my nerve." She tried to compose herself to the endless, nerve-racking wait.

She could hear the clock ticking on the mantelpiece. Everything was silent save for the clock and the wind and the shutter. And then suddenly a piercing scream shattered the silence, echoing through the house.

Cult Members Under Probe In Torture Case

They were then suspended by their feet, and branded on the body with a hot poker. They were forced to wear leggins studded with nails.

After the tortuous ordeal, the victims were dressed and tossed into a river. They swam ashore.

The lads said they were promised musical engagements by the cult in return for the initiation.

and his belief in its future. It will miss his good deeds, his comforting words and aid to the afflicted and downcast; his optimistic outlook on this life and the life he has now entered.

While the loss suffered by his family is personal, Charles Renwick in a broader sense belonged to Richmond, and the city itself will mourn his untimely summons. But his family and friends have the consolation that many share their grief as they walk through the valley of the shadow, and that his labors were not in vain, for they have created a monument to his memory that will never be destroyed.

READY FOR CALL

While not fearing death there were many things he wanted to do here, yet I know when he heard the still small voice that no man can disobey, he said: "Here, Lord, am I". What his thoughts were at that moment no man will never know, but I can hear him quoting the words of Whittier.

"And so beside the Silent Sea
I wait the muffled oar;
No harm from Him can come to me
On ocean or on shore.

"I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond his love and care.

"Yet, in the maddening maze of things,
And tossed by storm and flood
To one fixed trust my spirit clings
I know that God is good!"

TIGER WOMAN IS RELEASED FROM PRISON

TEHACHAPI, Cal., June 17—UP Clara Phillips, California's most notorious woman killer, settled her score with the law today for having beaten a love rival to death with a hammer 13 years ago, and by nightfall she was in another scuffle with police.

The once-famous "tiger woman", whose ferocity in the murder of pretty Alberta Meadows appalled a nation, walked through the white iron gates of the women's state prison to freedom, after serving 12 years and 15 days of a life sentence for killing Mrs. Meadows.

An hour later she was streaking across Mojave desert in a tan coupe with her sister, Etta May Jackson, driving, and two police cars in hot pursuit.

Clara said when she left the white stucco women's prison, where she spent the last five years of her sentence, that she was going home to her mother, Mrs. Ola Weaver, at La Mesa, Calif.

But police believed she was going to join Armour Phillips, her husband, over whose love she killed Mrs. Meadows on July 12, 1922. Phillips reportedly is wanted in connection with a bondjumping charge in Los Angeles.

When Clara appeared bright and early at the prison gates, where she was met by her sister and a friend, there was little about the plump, well-dressed woman verging on middle age, to suggest the lean, statuesque splendor of the "tiger woman" who killed for love.

She wore a dark blue crepe dress with lavendar lace, a coat trimmed with dyed ermine. Her face was powdered but not rouged, her grayish brown curls tucked neatly under a close fitting blue toque.

She chatted readily with newsmen, posed smilingly for photographers. Asked about her husband, who "dropped out of sight" a year ago, she shrugged and said she was "not thinking of my husband—but about starting life over."

Purse Snatcher Is Hunted By Officers

Police yesterday were searching for a woman who allegedly attempted to take a purse owned by Mrs. J. H. Craycroft, 433 Nevin avenue, while the latter was shopping at a chain store.

Mrs. Craycroft said she saw the woman trying to open her purse and when she turned, the woman fled out of the store. She gave police a good description of the suspect, whom police believe is responsible for a series of thefts.

Pre-Natal Care in Respect to Thyroid Obviates Worst of Goitre Calamities

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

THERE is another condition, due to lack of function of the thyroid gland, that is still more deplorable than myxedema. It is called cretinism. It begins before birth or shortly after birth and is due to a more or less complete lack of thyroid secretion. In the goitre regions the lack of iodine in the mother's system may cause the disease in the child.

DR. CHRISMAN

It manifests itself by a stunted physical, as well as sluggish mental, development. The condition can be detected very early by a thickening of the skin, hoarseness of the voice, and a peculiar blank puffy appearance of the face. The forehead broadens, spreading the eyes apart.

The infant grows slowly and is very tardy in walking or talking. Either or both of these functions may never develop to any degree of usefulness. The appearance becomes more and more pathetic as the nose broadens, the nostrils flare out with the effort to get oxygen, and the mouth hangs open.

The physical proportions fail to develop and we are led to think that all dwarfed conditions are caused by cretinism. Frequently the mental blankness leads them to sit for hours in idleness, responding to approach only by grins or grunts. Some of them are quite sweet-tempered, even amusing and clown-like.

Pre-Natal Care Necessary

The condition can and must be prevented, mostly by care of the mother before the birth of the child. In all the so-called "goitre regions," every pregnant woman should have some iodine added to her diet and possibly some thyroid extract. This can be prescribed only by a physician. Just what her need may be is determined by the metabolic rate.

Any noticeable lack of energy in a prospective mother should be the cause of suspicion and attention. After the child is born, the first symptoms of deficient thyroid must have medication.

Much can be done by the continued administration of large doses of thyroid extract. Most of these afflicted creatures live a long life and many of them are helpless imbeciles.

I referred yesterday to the questions arising when an operation for goitre did not seem to be successful. Here is a letter from Mrs. G. E. H., which is a very intelligent report on a typical case. Her operation took place two years ago in a famous Boston clinic. She still suffers from extreme nervousness, in spite of effort at self control. The old symptoms of painful protruding eyes, flushed face, trembling chin, and a tendency of the throat to contract when in crowds or conversing are still with her, and they are familiar enough on hospital records.

Details Make Difference

The letter incloses the stated clinical record of the operation which was "Primary Hyperthyroidism: Subtotal Thyroidectomy."

This merely means that all but a portion of the enlarged gland was removed and the case was one of simple goitre. However, some details of the record make all the difference.

It was necessary to leave a smaller portion of the left lobe than of the right. The inferior thyroid artery on the right side bled excessively and had to be tied off. The possible secret of the report may be found in the item that "no parathyroids were seen."

This isn't unusual, as they are very small and obscurely placed. But if the parathyroids were the seat of the deficiency, it would account for the cramping muscles of the larynx, the tremor of the chin, and the general feeling of the nervousness.

The case would call, not so much for iodine, as for calcium which the system requires to keep up metabolism. This can be given by the mouth or by injection. A few X-ray treatments might stimulate these organs also.

The thyroid doesn't exactly "grow again," as some think, but the portions of the gland left in the neck are inclined sometimes to enlarge as before, if the same sort of excitation is present.

Modes and Manners

QUESTION: "When a hostess answers the doorbell, is she supposed to shake hands with the incoming guest?—Mrs. F. G."

ANSWER: She should always shake hands with the guest, grown-up or child, and show by her cordial greeting, or by saying it, how glad she is that the guest has come.

Profiles For Today

Sidney R. Kent Real Film Pioneer

By TALBOT LAKE

THE saga of the motion picture industry tells of many pioneers who helped build it into America's fifth industry, but not many of them still remain active in the bustling, cut-throat business it is now. One of the most colorful of the tribe is Sidney R. Kent, who becomes president of the new merger of Fox Film and Twentieth Century Pictures.

Outside of a few transformed actors and other stage people who had college educations, the executives and artisans of the old days were men who had come through the college of hard knocks to try this new thing, little dreaming of the future of their experiment. Sidney Kent belonged — and belongs — to this early group. They were first a modest crew, content to make their so-much per, but later when the money rolled in they rode the crest in untamed splendor.

This was too much for many of the early filmites, but some with leveler heads stayed on as the field grew to its present tremendous proportions, advancing and developing along with the business.

Kent started out at fourteen as a stoker in a Lincoln, Neb., greenhouse, then he became a chain carrier for a Colorado surveying gang. A period of salesmanship came next and he worked in such fields as coal, steel, and drugs. When he finally looked around for a career he picked the films and called the shot correctly. He made a connection in the business department of the old Vitagraph Company, rising rapidly. When the General Film Company, of which Vitagraph was a unit, was under a cloud of $25,000,000 in judgments, he did a good job of excavation. But General went under just the same.

Casting about, he told Adolph Zukor of Famous-Players he would work for him for nothing. He quickly gained prominence in this company and finally became vice-president of the Publix Corporation.

Kent never forgets his early days, and has a great memory for the old-timers of the industry. He stands, along with Cecil De Mille, Zukor, Fox, D. W. Griffith, Winfield Sheehan, Lasky, P. A. Powers, Rowland and a few others as an important landmark in the history of motion pictures.

Tip on Potatoes

When boiling potatoes with their jackets on, it is a good idea to split them around the center. This will permit the salted water to boil through and flavor the whole potato.

Guide to Charm

Man No Sissy If He Needs Face Lotion

By JACQUELINE HUNT

THE whole American conception of beauty is built around one thing — fastidiousness. In a woman, one expects a flawless skin, sparkling teeth, pleasant breath, clean hands and nails, and snowy, crisply-fresh lingerie touches to her costume. A man must be clean-shaven and smooth-skinned, his hands, nails and the details of his costume immaculate.

A man's skin never looks really clean unless he has had a good shave, so every man will find a good razor with keen blades a wise investment, along with a good shaving preparation. And may I suggest to you men who have difficulty in finding the best soap or other preparation for this purpose, that you try any good toilet soap that makes a stiff, lasting lather?

After shaving, rinse the skin thoroughly and pat dry, then apply a good lotion to repair any razor damage, tighten the pores of the skin and send you to your office feeling younger and refreshed. Many men complain that they dislike after-shaving lotions because they are so strongly perfumed.

MISS HUNT

If you share this feeling then you will be glad to know that one well-known manufacturer has brought out a delicately fern-scented lotion that is masculine without being in the least strong or obviously perfumed.

If your skin looks softer and feels better for a dusting of powder after your shaving lotion has dried, then use powder. There are tinted masculine talcums for this purpose and men are using them more than ever before. Use a pad of cotton for applying the powder, and a fresh pad for removing the excess.

A blemished complexion should be treated in much the same way as women treat their own complexion troubles. The skin should be cleansed thoroughly with a [illegible] washcloth or complexion brush, rinsed thoroughly and patted with an astringent preparation, or in the case of acne with an acne ointment or lotion. In the case of acne you will find the use of a calming lotion soothing and protective during the day.

Every man should own a manicure set, possibly one made up to suit his needs from simple items that he can purchase at the five-and-ten. A buffer, a good nail file, cuticle softener, a powder polish and a stiff nail brush will probably be sufficient. Use them nightly to keep the color of your nails good, their surface smooth and your cuticles free from painful hangnails.

Your toilet accessories should include a bath brush that will keep your skin smooth and invigorated. There is one with a long, detachable handle that you can use to scrub up and down your spine or use without the handle for more accessible spots like knees and elbows. Find a bath soap that you enjoy using, one that makes a stiff, lasting lather and without a pronounced odor or, if you are troubled with perspiration, get one of the soaps with antiseptic properties.

A Study In Sophistication

For that day in June, when the wedding bells ring, what could be more lovely than a bridal costume such as this white satin one worn by Rosalind Culli, young film player? The slinky lines of the gown are contradicted by the soft bodice of tucked net and the little cap sleeves which top the long, transparent ones of net. Rosalind's veil is just as diaphanous as the bridal mode demands this season. It is made of cream net with a single flounce of net bordering it all around. Orange blossoms form the small corsage on the bodice and encircle the cap of net which holds her blonde tresses in place.

Garnishes Easy Method To Dress Up the Dinner

By JUDITH WILSON

THE difference between a fair cook and a really thrilling one is not always a difference in ability. One woman is content merely to cook the food and serve it, while the other possesses the gift of knowing exactly what little touch to add to lift a simple dish out of the ordinary class.

Of course, frills cannot be expected to conceal poor cooking.

Garnishes are one method of making food more interesting. Take soups, for instance. Just a sprinkle of chopped parsley, grated cheese, or a few tiny croutons made of browned toast are simple additions that make soup more satisfying and attractive.

Add finely chopped browned bacon to piping hot cream of pea soup, or use thin shavings of frizzled ham with cream of asparagus soup. Add tiny meat balls to cabbage or vegetable soup. A few snowy grains of popcorn make cream of corn soup, corn chowder or consomme more appealing.

Still other ideas for soup are toasted oyster crackers, thin slivers of left over chicken, chopped pimiento or whole cooked green peas. The latter are especially nice with the paler cream soups. Meat broths call for dumplings and gumbos for rice. So much for soup!

DINNERS

Tomato-Cottage Cheese Appetizers
Rice and Fish Mold with Creamed New Peas
Salads in Wooden Bowls with Special Dressing
Orange-Cocoanut Cake
Tea

Cream of Corn Soup
Celery and Olives
Stuffed Veal Rolls Gravy
Mashed Potatoes
Grilled Tomatoes
Pineapple Bavarian Cream
Coffee

When you serve celery, cut the tender inside stalks into four inch lengths, then with a sharp knife split down in thin strips to within an inch of the bottom, then drop into ice water to curl. Serve mixed with ripe and green olives.

When a few chopped dates or nuts will convert a dish of cereal into a treat instead of something that must be eaten, then the effort is worthwhile. Remember you are adding food value as well as attractiveness and flavor! Chopped nuts or raisins or both make plain baked apples into something that will appeal to all the family.

Candied fruit is more expensive, but it, too, is nice for giving your desserts character and color and a little bit of it will go a long way. A bright dab of jelly on top of a dessert garnished with whipped cream or covered with a meringue is another means of lifting plain rice pudding or cottage pudding out of the doldrums.

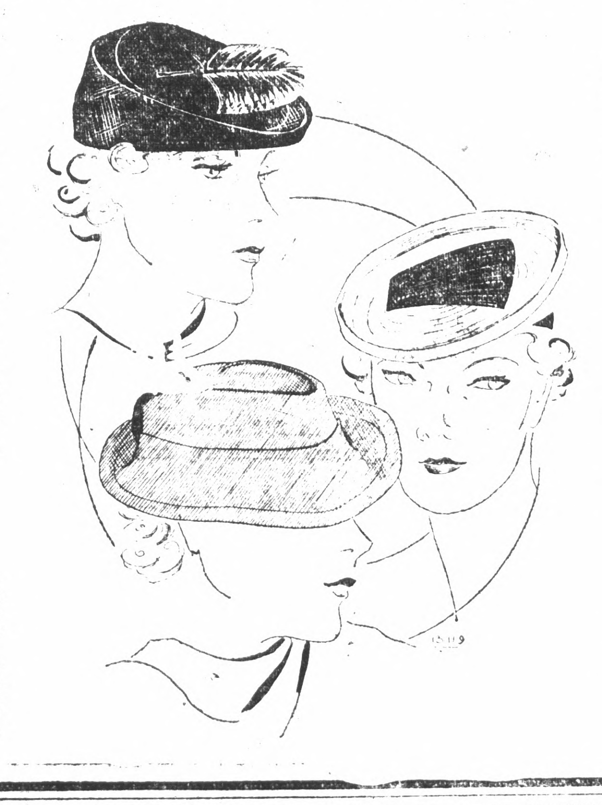
With sauces you can turn tricks with meats, vegetables and even desserts. Try a well seasoned mushroom sauce over cooked, buttered spinach and see how willingly your family goes for it.

Canned or fresh fruits when served as dessert are made more inviting for a sprinkling of tender shredded cocoanut. Try using cocoanut as a garnish for your gelatine desserts and your frozen desserts too.

Salad Dressing

A dressing that is different occasionally makes salads more welcome. Of course you have learned how attractive and clever the wooden salad bowls are. The next time you put a salad of mixed greens into them, try this dressing: Combine one-half cup each of sugar and vinegar, two tablespoons salad oil, two teaspoons grated onion, one tablespoon chopped sweet pepper, one teaspoon salt, paprika to taste, four drops Worcestershire sauce and one tablespoon ground or finely chopped celery. Mix the ingredients, set over cracked ice and whip with a rotary beater until thick.

Linen Skirts, Novelty Blouses Unite



By IRENE VAIL

New York — Many shops are now concentrating on linen skirts and novelty blouses, realizing that this sort of combine is the best possible summer costume. It may be worn with a contrasting jacket or with a linen one matching the skirt, but the odd jacket is the best seller.

Linen skirts are made with convenient pockets, patch type usually, and depend on buttons for a good deal of their chic.

Contrasting belts are preferred, which reminds me to say that belts have become extremely interesting, running as they do to original buckles and color combinations. Wide belts are especially good if one can wear them.

Sketched today are three versions of the forward hat line, as noted in recent imports.

At the upper left is a Suzanne Talbot model, narrow, forward, and with deep back. It is of a shiny black crin-like fabric, with a clipped ostrich feather thrust forward through the shallow crown.

Directly below is the modified forward brim in a casual felt of bright red chamois felt, from Suzy, with the crown following this movement, and with a touch of navy blue in the ornament at back.

The third hat is from Coupy. It is round, plate-like, with an upstanding kettle edge. Natural Tuscan braid is combined with a closely stitched black [illegible], in the center.

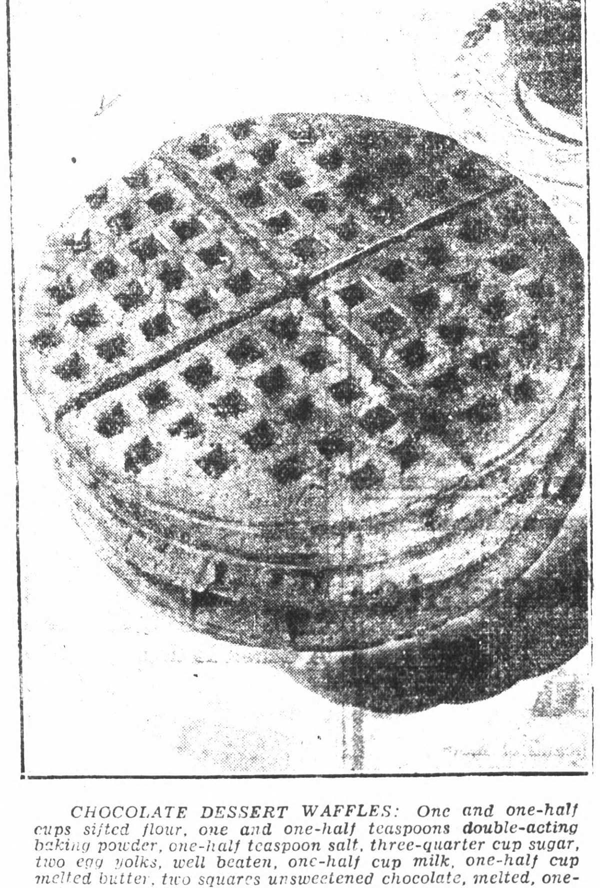
Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "My face is covered with pimples and nothing seems to help the condition. I use only soaps and water on my skin, rinse well and use alcohol or an antiseptic to dry up the pimples, still there is no improvement. Can you suggest some more effective treatment?

—Alyce."

The trouble probably comes from inside. Drink lots of water and eat lots of green salads and cooked vegetables at mealtime. Drink milk and lots of fruit juice and eat lean meats, whole cereal breads and fresh fruit or dates and figs for dessert. Eat only at mealtime. Eating between meals often causes indigestion.

A "DIFFERENT" WAFFLE



CHOCOLATE DESSERT WAFFLES: One and one-half cups sifted flour, one and one-half teaspoons double-acting baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, three-quarter cup sugar, two egg yolks, well beaten, one-half cup milk, one-half cup melted butter, two squares unsweetened chocolate, melted, one-half teaspoon vanilla, two egg whites, stiffly beaten.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt, and sugar, and sift again. Combine egg yolks and milk; add to flour mixture, beating until smooth. Combine butter and chocolate; add to batter and blend. Add vanilla. Fold in egg whites. Bake in hot waffle iron. Serve hot with whipped cream, orange marmalade, or orange sauce. Makes four four-section waffles.

MODERN WOMEN

The Masculine and Feminine Angles on the Case of the Wife in Debt

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

THE wife who spends the household money unwisely and plunges her husband in debt, for which he, not she, is liable, is getting scant sympathy from the readers of this column.

In all fairness to the unlikely lady I must say that in general, for I know nothing about her particular case, there is a very thin and faint line between which is household money and which may be spent by the housekeeper on her own amusement or her personal needs. That's a subject in itself. Such a hazy distribution of the family funds is bound to lead to misunderstandings.

"Dear Mrs. Martin: In your column recently you discussed the affairs of a young wife who ran into debt because she handled the family finances carelessly. According to a clipping from your column which I have at hand, the young wife was much troubled and perplexed and did not know whether to tell her husband or resort to deceit to try to cover up in some manner unknown to him.

"I presume, as you do, that this young wife has been playing bridge or buying too many clothes. The young wives nowadays are idle the greater part of the time, and it is a wonder they do not get into more mischief than they do. Many of them are childless. They live in two or three room apartments.

No Household Duties

"They do not even have household duties to interest them. By 10:30 in the morning they are sitting around twiddling their thumbs and looking for trouble. Just as sure as an idle mind is the Devil's workshop, the strictly modern young matron is a fair target.

"I haven't much sympathy for a wife who spends more money than her husband gives her or mismanages funds entrusted to her care. If this young wife has defaulted the only decent thing for her to do is to curtail on her own expenditures until she makes up the difference. But I am betting that she will do nothing of the kind. Dollars to doughnuts, she postpones the settlement day or tries to juggle her money in such manner that things will be a great deal more involved as time goes on.

I am not one of those men who think all women are noble. Americans are too lenient with women and it gets everyone into a lot of trouble. Incidentally, this sloppy attitude doesn't do anything for the women, because they have little respect for a man who permits them to do as they please. Women make better wives when they are controlled within reason.

A Weekly Arrangement

"In the matter of family finances there should be some sort of a settlement or agreement every week. And where there is a limited amount of money there should be no deception on either side. No couple can accomplish anything by holding out. There is always a day of reckoning, and the longer it is deferred the tougher the terms of settlement. Marriage is one game in which good, clean sportsmanship wins. Anybody who tries to violate the rules is penalized sooner or later.

"If the young wife you describe would economize until she makes up her losses I think she would be greatly improved by the experience. Next time she would think twice before she juggled the family funds. Women who want more money than their husbands can give them should go to work and earn it.

"Mere Man."

"Dear Mrs. Martin: The wife who has run into debt without her husband's knowledge must make a clean breast of it and take the consequence. At least, that is the idea in our household where we discussed this case. My husband says that, since husbands are responsible for their wives' debts and wives cannot be held responsible for their husbands', that it's up to the wife to go to her husband without delay and make a settlement of their position. She has no business to plunge him into debt without his knowledge, anyway. Partner."

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

THE other day the teacher sent a note to Bobby's mother requesting her to come up to school. They had a talk together about Bobby's work, which is far below passing. "In fairness to Bobby," the teacher said, "he should be given a chance to repeat the same class work next term." At this suggestion the mother turned pale. "Wait until his father hears about this," she blurted. "He'll feel horribly ashamed. He always has felt a little sensitive about Bobby's low marks in school. When other parents boast of their children's splendid progress at school, it hurts him. I generally try to change the subject. If Bobby's left back—" Mother could not conceal her worried state. She was thinking: "How shall I break the news to dad?"

MRS. GOWARD

While mother was feeling sorry for herself and dad, the teacher's mind was on the boy. "About Bobby," she said. "He is a splendid boy, but unfortunately he is a slow learner. My aim is to build up his morale as a scholar and to teach him how to study. I shall need your full co-operation. You must try to accept his being left-back matter-of-factly. Don't tease or worry him."

Mother was feeling too sorry for herself to understand what a wonderful opportunity was being offered her Bobby. Thus, instead of thanking the teacher and vowing to win dad's co-operation in seeing the boy through the horrible ordeal of being left-back, she asked the teacher whether she wouldn't please try to promote Bobby anyway.

SECOND FLOOD BRINGS HAVOC TO NEBRASKA

McCOOK, Neb., June 17 (UP)—A second flood coursed down the stricken Republican river valley tonight, causing residents of half a dozen towns to flee to higher ground.

Four names were added to the list of 80 dead or missing in the flood of two weeks ago. Property damage mounted above $12,000,000.

FOUR MISSING

The McCook power plant was flooded for the second time and power was shut off.

Four persons were reported missing in the wake of the second flood. They were Mrs. Kate Bueherus and her three-year-old daughter and Mrs. Harold Mosier, 34, and daughter, Betty June, five, all residents of Benkelman.

CROPS DESTROYED

Benkelman, Trenton, Cambridge, Parks and other towns were menaced as the river spread two miles wide in some places.

Relief officials said they did not expect the river to rise as high as it did two weeks ago but they emphasized the demoralizing effect upon farmers who saw their second plantings of crops destroyed.

Makeshift repairs to bridges and levees crumbled before the onrush of water.

Ex-Felon Under Quiz As Suspect In Murder Case

FRESNO, June 17.—UP—A gory carpet and a blood-spotted baseball bat were investigated today as clues to a possible murder as John Kellogg, 21, former convict, was held in jail here.

Investigators from the district attorney's office dragged an irrigation ditch near Kellogg's home on the chance a corpse might have been dumped into the stream after a girl tipped them she had seen a carpet in the home covered with blood.

The bloody ball bat was found and remains of a carpet were in the ashes of a stove.

James Thuesen, deputy district attorney, said Kellogg told first he had killed a cat with the bat, then had said he had a fight with a negro. Kellogg served three years at San Quentin for burglary and was released a month ago.

Hospital Ordinance Proposal Is Debated At Supervisors Meet

is a example worthy of emulation.

The afternoon session began with the reading of the proposed ordinance by County Clerk Sam Wells and then Chairman Buchanan threw the meeting open to discussion.

Mrs. Wanda Muir Hanna said the plan submitted was similar to that in Alameda county, where she had heard it functioned very efficiently and at reduced cost to the taxpayers. Her main contention was that through the commission an investigation could be made as to the merits of every application this procedure allegedly resulting in decreased costs in other countries. After the plan was in operation she envisaged provision for the installation of a number of beds to take care of those who cannot afford private hospitalization, yet are in a position to contribute something for their care. She instanced the cases of many farmers, who are barely scratching out a living, cannot afford proper medical and hospital care and therefore are in the position of being forced to forego proper attention when the occasion demands.

ANOTHER IDEA

Mrs. Ed Burroughs, a representative of the farm group also favored the commission plan, being one of a committee of three to present the views of the farm group to the supervisors. She professed interest not only from a humanitarian standpoint, but also as a business proposition to get the most value for every dollar expended. Asked by Supervisor Long if she did not have in mind ultimately the intention of changing the hospital into a part-pay institution she replied that eventually the development would be along that line.

Chairman Buchanan interjected an inquiry whether the doctors sanctioned the speaker's idea and she said that she believed a physician big and broad enough in his views would be found in sympathy with it.

The chairman pointed out that in hospitalization a doctor first examined the applicant prior to his or her admission to the hospital. The statement was made in reply to an assertion that many cases were admitted without proper investigation and that some of them were not entitled to medical attention. "No man," said the chairman, "earning less than $100 a month has been ever been turned down by me."

ADVOCATES MORE ROOM

M. H. Vanderslice declared that he looked at the matter entirely from a humanitarian standpoint and would like to see another wing added to the county hospital to take care of those who cannot afford to pay $45 or $50 a week to private hospitals.

ECONOMICAL OPERATION

Anthony Crafton of Concord, a prominent member of the Farm Bureau frankly said he did not know whether the proposed commission was a good thing or not. The operation of the institution, he conceded had been economical and although the ratio of expense had increased faster than the population, it should not be forgotten, he declared that human misery had increased in a much faster ratio in recent years.

"Can we improve the administration of the hospital," he asked, "through the establishment of a commission? There is a very grave doubt in my mind that such will be the result.

"The Farm Bureau is in favor of the hospital receiving part-pay patients. The cost per capita during the past year was $1.63, which is quite reasonable. We think there is a large section of our people who should be entitled to hospitalization on a basis of what they can afford to pay. To do that we need an independent investigating agency responsible to the Board of Supervisors. I am telling you no secret when I say that such action would relieve you of quite an embarassment.

AGAINST CHANGE

"When I go into anything," said H. Tevan of Alhambra Valley, "I make a careful investigation. We do not know where this commission will lead and before action is taken we had better find out. Personally I believe the board has done good work in its conduct of the hospital and therefore am against making any change."

CHARGES POLITICS

"As far as the money side of the question is concerned, there is a very favorable situation," said J. B McFarland as the introductory remarks of his talk. "However, the appointment of a commission would eliminate politics from the situation."

"That is a statement you will have to prove before I am through" said Supervisor Long.

McFarland said that his remark had been misinterpreted and he did not think that political motives actuated the board in the conduct of the institution, but politics always entered into such situations.

BUCHANAN OPPOSED

McFarland, insisted that the commission would be a good thing and as the members would serve without compensation, no added expense would burden the county. Chairman Buchanan interrupted to say that the experience of the board has been, without exception, that when a commission had been appointed salaried jobs invariably followed in its wake. "As far as I am concerned," he said, "it might as well be known that I am against the proposed ordinance as it is drawn. Some of the suggestions made here today are good and merit further consideration and I would suggest that the hearing, on account of limited time, be postponed until a future date, but before the budget is adopted."

The suggestion was made in defense of the commission that every corporation had a board of directors, which received the reply from Buchanan that "we are your board of directors."

M. H. Vanderslice for the second time put himself on record as being against any change in the conduct of the hospital. He praised the supervisors and said he had never heard of a case which had been refused admission to the institution.

DR. LUCAS TALKS

For a time it looked as though the medical profession would be without any representative, but later Dr. W. S. Lucas appeared. He said the medical association favored an arrangement with private hospital, at base cost for the care of those who were unable to stand the expense of a private hospital.

ANOTHER BOARD DEFENDER

Mrs. Thomas Hall, of Pleasant Hill, also took up the cudgels in defense of the board and said during his long residence in the county the sick and ailing had been accorded proper attention in the county hospital.

PERCENTAGE SMALL

Supervisor Long ended the meeting with an enlightening talk. Reference had been made by one of the speakers to the numbers of patients which had been admitted to the hospital from Long's district. Mr. Long said that instead of 50 per cent of all the people hospitalized coming from his district, as had been claimed only 31.3 per cent of the cases have come from his district. "And this," he declared, "in face of the fact that 44.5 per cent of all the people in the county are in my district, 42.5 of all the assessable wealth is in my district and 43 per cent of all the automobiles in the county.

"In the past 13 months I have sent 707 people to the institution and that number represents a shade less than one per cent of my people. I have never hesitated to send people there who have been without work or not making enough to meet their living expenses. It is true they are not indigents in the definition of that word, paupers, and perhaps my actions have been extra legal, but I propose to keep on doing the same thing until I am enjoined. Perhaps I have made some mistakes. One thing is certain, the course I have pursued is the same course that is being advocated by some of the people here today—the care of people who cannot afford private hospitalization."

Marin County Commute Rates Are Increased

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17—UP—A 20 per cent increase in commute fares to Marin county was granted the Northwestern Pacific railroad today by the State railroad commission, effective July 7. The company, claiming heavy losses, had asked increases up to 86 per cent.

Only exception to the blanket increases will be the Sausalito-San Francisco ferry run. The commission suggested a $130,000 yearly loss might be counterbalanced at least partially by a "paid pass" schedule and weekly instead of monthly commute books.

oom and noticing that her face was very red asked her what was the matter. She replied: 'Dearie, I must have taken those other pills and they are coming out on me.'

"A phone call was made to Dr. J. W. Bumgarner and he said 'this woman belongs in the hospital.' He advised giving her water and mustard and we did. After that she began vomiting. The ambulance arrived and mother was taken to the hospital but no emergency treatment was given her. On the way to the county hospital the nurse who accompanied her asked mother if there was any motive and she said she was worrying about father's cut and had taken an additional dose of the reducing pills through mistake."

According to relatives Mrs. Alberts had been taking the reducing tablets for a period of about eight months, they having been prescribed by the health clinic.

Funeral services will be held this morning at 10 o'clock from the Wilson & Kratzer chapel for Mrs. Alberts.

Wilson Quits; Dr.C.L.Abbott Is Coroner

Coroner Aubrey Wilson yesterday morning presented to the board of supervisors at Martinez his resignation. The board immediately appointed Dr. C. L. Abbott to fill the vacancy.

Wilson, who was re-elected last year, suffered a severe illness several months ago and was confined to a local hospital for many weeks and later went to the St. Helena sanitorium where he has been recovering his health.

Dr. Abbott was coroner for 12 years, resigning in 1917 when he entered the army.

It was indicated yesterday that there will be no changes in the positions of deputy coroner in various towns in the county.

Wilson was elected coroner in 1926 and has served continuously since that time.

West Case To Be Given Jury This Morning

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17—UP—Charges against Herman E. West, Mendocino county high school teacher, of illicit relations with a 17-year-old girl student, were expected to reach the jury tomorrow morning.

The defense closed today after presenting testimony of Miss Mary Fitzgerald, art teacher, of West's public conduct with the girl in the case, Esther Phelps.

Earlier, Mrs. Angela Thompson, Madera, related that the girl had "laughed" when police asked following the denouncement of a two-night stay by the couple in a hotel here, if West had kidnaped her.

West's defense has been that he kept the girl in the hotel to prevent her from going out with a San Francisco "boy friend."

Final arguments were begun this afternoon and were to be concluded tomorrow.

this division was not included, as the division had never paid, but on the insistence of City Attorney Carlson and the members of the council provision was finally made for it. At the present time the Barrett avenue line and the Pullman line are being operated at a loss of over $1.000 per month. It might be possible by taking off some of the buses that run down Macdonald avenue, and diverting them, that better service could be had on the Pullman line.

TO PRESENT PROPOSITION

St. Sure in closing said that on next Monday night he would present to the council a definite proposition concerning the Pullman line.

The official stressed the point that the company would not consent to any change that would increase the present losses.
